The Voodoo Book

Last week the "Nation" reviewed MR. W. B. SEABROOK'S book on Haiti slightingly, and with considerable inaccuracy. Below are a few extracts from leading journals in rather a different vein.

The Magic Island

2nd Large Impression. Illustrated. 12/6 net.

Times: "Apart from the exceedingly interesting account of Voodooism, the author deals with the Culte des Morts and with Haitian magic, which is a good deal stronger than outsiders suppose. The reader will put down this book with the impression that he has been entertained, shocked, harrowed, amused, and, above all, interested by an account of what might well have been happening in some other world, and a very strange and curious one at that."

Saturday Review: "Mr. Seabrook has done justice to his remarkable subject not only in investigating its mysteries, but in presenting the results of his work."

Manchester Guardian: "His interesting account of Voodoo and the sacrificial ceremony in which he took part adds much to knowledge of that mystery religion."

Evening Standard: "An extraordinary story is that black magic can animate the newly dead into a sort of robot life and employ them as slaves. The tale of nine zombies thus galvanized for work in the cane-fields is a brilliant effort in the macabre."

J. B. PRIESTLEY in Evening News: "Capital reading. For romantic stuff you can hardly improve on the true tale of the American sergeant of marines who is now King of the island of La Gonave."

THE GREAT ATLANTIC PRIZE NOVEL COMPETITION

George G. Harrap & Co., Ltd., offer

£2000

in addition to full royalties for the most interesting novel submitted before January 15th, 1930. Full details will be sent in due course on application to

Munro, Ashley Dukes, Reginald Berkeley, Charles McEvoy, Noel Coward, and Sutton Vane. [March 22

March Novels

The Keys of England

By W. VICTOR COOK. 7/6 net.

The publishers recommend with complete confidence this romance of thirteenth-century Sussex, dealing with Rye and the Cinque Ports in the days of Simon de Montfort, by the author of The Story of Sussex. A critic has compared it favourably with A Gentleman of France and The White Company. [March 15.

The Gillespie Suicide Mystery

By LEONARD R. GRIBBLE. 7/6 net.

A mystery story by a new writer. There are no hidden clues or characters, and the reader has the same opportunity as Detective Slade to solve the mystery. [March 15.

The Mayfair Mystery

By HENRY HOLT. 7/6 net

The author spent several years in Fleet Street as a crime expert. [March 22

HARRAP

Routledge: Kegan Paul

THE HISTORY OF THE DEVIL

By R. LOWE THOMPSON. 8 Plates. 7s. 6d. net.

An account of the horned god from the Stone Age till modern times, showing the grip he has exerted and still exerts on men's minds. "The book is excellent, provocative alike of thought and of expectation."—New Statesman. "Treated with a wealth of detail and a full knowledge alike of history and folklore."—Manchester Guardian.

TRAVELS IN PERSIA

By THOMAS HERBERT, 1627–9. Edited and Abridged by Sir WILLIAM FOSTER, C.I.E. With 13 Plates. 15s. net.

"One of the most delightful early travel books."—Yorkshire Post. "He had a good eye for detail and a great appetite for information. His was one of the best of seventeenth-century travel narratives."—Times Literary Supplement. "This delightful classic."—Saturday Review.

TRAVELS OF IBN BATTUTA

Edited, selected and translated from the Arabic by H. A. R. GIBB. With 8 Plates and Maps. 15s. net.

Ibn Battuta, who travelled between 1324 and 1354, was the greatest Moslem traveller of his day. In this book, long inaccessible to English readers, he not only gives us a wonderful human document, but also brings to life the men and manners of the great medieval Islamic civilization.

THE DIALOGUE ON MIRACLES

By CAESARIUS OF HEISTERBACH, 1220–35. Translated by H. von E. SCOTT and C. SWINTON BLAND. With an Introduction by G. G. COULTON. With 12 Plates. Two volumes. 36s. net the set.

This addition to the Broadway Medieval Library opens up an invaluable mine of first-hand information concerning thirteenth-century people and events.

PRIMITIVE ECONOMICS OF THE MAORI

By RAYMOND FIRTH. With a Preface by R. H. TAWNEY. With 16 Plates and 2 Maps. 25s. net.

"An account of the social and economic organization of the Maori people written with imaginative insight. His book is charming and illuminating, even to one unversed in the controversies discussed."—From the Preface.

CHRISTIAN UNITY

By the Rev. G. J. SLOSSER. With Introductions by the ARCHBISHOP of YORK and by the Rev. A. E. GARVIE, D.D. 21s. net.

"There has not been in the world hitherto, as far as I know, any survey of that field that can compare with this in thoroughness and completeness."—The Archbishop of York.

EDEN'S STATE OF THE POOR

Abridged, with an Introduction, by A. G. L. ROGERS. 15s. net.

"He has done a valuable service in preparing a new edition. What he has given us (apart from his own excellent Introduction) is all the best of Eden, and it is well worth reading."—New Statesman.

A CZECH ANTHOLOGY

Selected and translated by PAUL SELVER. 7s. 6d. net.

"He has continued his good work, and given us a volume of very excellent translations, which begins with a letter of Jan Hus in the fourteenth century, and closes with the work of contemporary writers."—Daily News.

THE TRAGEDY OF GREECE

By S. P. P. COSMETATOS. 15s. net.

"A serious contribution to recent Greek history, and as such should be treated with respect."—New Leader. "His extremely dramatic chronicle."—Observer. "Illustrates well the manners of great countries towards little ones when they have them at their mercy."—English Review.

¶ Library of Educational Psychology

EMOTION AND DELINQUENCY

A STUDY OF FEMALE CRIMINALS.

By L. GRIMBERG, M.D. 7s. 6d. net.

"Most of the books written on the subject are characterised by a fictitious simplicity and a dogmatism which are far from warranted. Dr. Grimberg's book has features of interest and originality which lift it from the general rut."—Times Literary Supplement.

THE CHILD IN PRIMITIVE SOCIETY

By NATHAN MILLER. 12s. 6d. net.

"Devotes an exceedingly interesting chapter to the systems of education in vogue among the various primitive races."—Times Educational Supplement. "Will be read with deep interest by educationists."—Education Outlook.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

An original work which sheds new light on problems of the utmost interest to every intelligent man and woman.

By

JULIAN HUXLEY
H. G. WELLS & G. P. WELLS

THIS original new work appeals first and foremost to readers of sound general education who wish to bring their minds up to date with current biological knowledge. It is lucid, persuasive, complete and exact, and fully and abundantly illustrated; every section is alive with fresh and stimulating ideas. It is the joint work of three able and original men, of whom two are biological scholars and investigators, and the third, one of our most brilliant thinkers and writers. It tells all the main facts and all the newest concepts and discoveries about our bodies and our minds in health and disease. It gives a fascinating survey of the whole realm of natural history. It relates the history and adventure of life in time. It sets before its readers with perfect fairness and clearness the essentials of the great controversies about Evolution and the present state of that discussion. It enters into the issues of what are called "supernormal" phenomena. It is in fact, an encyclopedia of biology and biological facts.

INVOCATIONS TO ANGELS

Poems by Edgell Rickword

"Few living poets have a more certain command of technique, and he accepts nothing secondhand in either thought or manner."
—HUMBERT WOLFE in the Observer.

"He is one of the very few modern poets with whom the student of poetry need cultivate a more than nodding acquaintance; his volume is one of the few which a critic should go to the trouble of purchasing and keeping on his shelves."—New Statesman.

"But a reviewer cannot presume with his farthing candle to guide a writer of that speculative insistency and unborrowed style. For scale of vision, and grim wit, and various verse, he may direct the reader to the masque called 'The Happy New Year' at the end of Mr. Rickword's book."—E. B. in The Nation.

A New Constable Classic—

VATHEK

and The Episodes of Vathek

By WILLIAM BECKFORD of Fonthill.

Saturday Review: "The chief triumph of Beckford is in the adjustment of what is eighteenth century and what anticipates the nineteenth century, in what might have been an inchoate extravaganza but is a coherent work of art. Vathek is romanticism streaked with the Orientalism and the mockery of the French eighteenth century, but touched at times with the ardour and unrest of the next generation of writers."

With a historical introduction and notes by Guy Chapman, and eight collotype plates, one of which is coloured by hand. Two volumes, buckram, fully gilt. 31s. 6d.

To be Published on the 14th.

Saturday Review: "The book is a fine achievement, challenging comparison with its predecessor, 'The Rector's Daughter,' and sustaining it."

S. P. B. Mais in the Daily Telegraph: "The post-war generation has not in fiction been often, if at all, portrayed with such sympathy and understanding."

A SOLDIER'S DIARY OF THE GREAT WAR

With an Introduction by

Henry Williamson

'The entries are personal, yet seldom subjective; usually vivid, and always restrained. They are the writings of a man who seeks, within his book, that privacy and self-communion which in the land of his birth would be unexpressed, part of his normal life. . . . To many these pages will appear entirely true; to almost as many they will be typical of the War as the ordinary man saw it.'—Introduction. 7*s.* 6*d. net.*

THE TRUTH BEHIND THE NEWS, 1918 - 1928

By George Seldes

'He went everywhere and saw everything from Paris to Moscow and Bagdad, and has a great many good tales to tell; incidentally he includes in his volume the most complete and documented account of the working of the Fascist censorship that we have yet seen.'—The New Statesmau. 18*s. net.*

THE BOOK WITHOUT A NAME

BEING THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY DIARY OF AN UNMARRIED ENGLISH LADY TO HER NATURAL SON

Edited by E. R. P.

This is the random journal intime of a lady of means at the end of the eighteenth century. Her character is revealed as that of a woman, clear-sighted, intelligent and ardent, with a love of nature and a passion for freedom rare in her day. 7*s.* 6*d. net.*

CHRISTIANITY AND THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

By Arthur Mayhew, C.I.E.

'Mr. Mayhew's book is written out of abundant knowledge, especially of the earlier and obscurer period. His partisanship is an advantage in a man so honest; you know where he stands and respect him for it. His book fills a place empty hitherto.'—The Observer. 12*s.* 6*d. net.*

HUCCA'S MOOR

A novel by

Ruth Manning-Sanders

The watchful critic will have noted a steady progress in Mrs. Manning-Sanders's three previous novels. In this book he will recognise achievement that places her in the front rank of English novelists.

'A strange, stark drama, with many a passage of poetical beauty which will grip the reader's imagination.'—The Morning Post. 7*s.* 6*d. net.*

SOME NEW AND FORTHCOMING

'BATSFORD' BOOKS

THE DOMESTIC ARCHITECTURE OF ENGLAND DURING THE TUDOR PERIOD

By THOMAS GARNER and ARTHUR STRATTON, F.R.I.B.A. Second edition, revised and enlarged, comprising 210 plates, finely reproduced in collotype, and 250 pages of Historical and Descriptive Text, including 462 illustrations of Additional Views, Plans, Details, etc., from photographs and drawings, making a total of over 800 illustrations in all. In two volumes, small folio, buckram, gilt, 9 guineas net the set. (The volumes cannot be obtained separately.)

"In Tudor we have what might be called the true vernacular architecture. As such, the interest is not confined to architects, and, as almost every one of the buildings has a history, the plates can be enjoyed by all educated Englishmen. Without exaggeration it can be called a national work, and on that account deserves the fullest appreciation."—The Architect.
